Lake Road Reports Deficit of Over $4,300,000

The stockholders of the St. Johnsbury & Lake Champlain Railroad have received the report of the finances of their property for the year 1919 and the annual deficit is $4,300,000. Their principal income was $20,000 rental from the Main Central railroad for the 22 miles of road between St. Johnsbury and Lunenburg. To this sum was added $1,259.34 from other sources, making a total income of $21,259.34. The administration expenses were $2,493.89 and the accrued interest on the funded debt $125,000. In the latter charge is $58,600 interest on bonds owned by the B. & M. amounting to $1,172,000, which has not been paid. Other deductions from the income bring the total up to $126,940.85.

The liabilities include common stock of a par value of $2,562,449, preferred stock of $1,154,400, first mortgage bonds of $2,500,000 and unpaid interest of $1,549,000.54. The total liabilities are given at $9,112,132. The assets are given at $4,794,941.32 and the balance is struck by charging to profit and loss as deficit the sum of $4,317,190.75.

The income from all sources except mail showed an increase over 1918. The freight revenue was $259,686.65, the passenger revenue $84,559.25, mail revenue $9,300, express revenue $9,300, milk revenue $54,205.35. In operating statistics 132,176 passenger were carried in 1919 as against 118,433 in 1918, and 276,263 tons of freight were hauled as against 293,538 in 1918.

Of the 48,797 shares of common stock in this road the Boston & Maine owns 31,760, and of the 22,937 shares of preferred stock the B. & M. owns 7,630. It also owns $1,172,000 of the bonds. Some years ago the common stock in the road was quoted at 23 cents a share and the preferred stock at $1.25, the par value of both kinds being $50.

Forty of the species known to Vermont grow within a radius of five miles of the Museum. RURAL LIFE

IN GOVERNOR COOLIDGE'S HOME

Bears Taken In Spring Traps and Deer Mix With Cattle

An editorial writer of the New York Times is up in Gov. Coolidge's old home in Windsor county and describes its rustic simplicity as follows: Governor Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts, perhaps the most modest man who ever held public office, is back home in Plymouth Notch, in a region where Bruin is taken in spring-traps every year and where deer feed with cattle in the rock pastures. As Gov. Coolidge has always shunned the limelight of "Who's Who," he is likely to meet neighbors who do not know that he has been nominated for Vice President, and who will never know it from his lips. It is a large, wild, unconventional township in the heart of the Green Mountains of rough farms and lonely farmhouses.

The call of Bob White is heard in season, but never the whistle of a locomotive, except faintly at times on the wings of a south wind coming from Ludlow, six miles away from Tyson, a Plymouth settlement and out post. A Plymouth man is passing rich on a few hundred dollars a year. All men are equal in the local view and addressed by a shortened first name. The Governor of Massachusetts is Cal to the fathers of the hamlet, and they must wonder why such a quiet, no-account chap happened to be nominated for the job of Vice President, as they learn by the Rutland paper, R. F. D. Those who do not take a paper will be told by Summer visitors of the honor done Plymouth.

Everybody in Peacham has heard of Colonel Harvey, and everybody in Grafton of John Barrett. But Calvin Coolidge will have to be elected Vice President to be generally known in secluded Plymouth, which is partly the fault of the Governor of Massachusetts.

Plymouth is mainly forest and mountains, with small lakes, mere mountain mirrors, strung along the Black river. It is one of the most beautiful regions in all New England. There is a view from every hillside, and there are more hill sides than can be counted. It is a paradise for walkers and for trout fishermen. Any one with a bent pin can catch trout in the Ottaquechee before the July heats. Killington peak looms into the sky to lure climbers.

From its craggy summit the White Mountains and Lake Champlain, with the Adirondacks tumbled beyond, can be seen. Under the rock peak is a spring with a temperature of 38 degrees on a sweltering day. Calvin Coolidge must have gone up Killington by the Juggernaut Trail in his boyhood. By following the brook until it is so small it trickles through the moss and ferns no one need get lost. There are the Pico peaks and Saltash mountain for variety.

If the Governor does not want to follow the blazed trail, he can lie in the shade of an abandoned orchard, with a fair chance to see deer feeding. It is a restful occupation. It is said that he will help his father in the haymaking. But in those hill pastures the wagon is often tilted up by the steepness of the slope, and pitching hay becomes a muscular performance, perhaps a little too hard for a man who has to write a speech accepting a nomination for Vice President.

If Calvin Coolidge had stayed on the old homestead at Plymouth Notch he would be more interested in the price of milk and of hay per ton than in the Peace Treaty and the Covenant and he might have taken his turn in the Legislature at Montpelier, which would have been his utmost dignity. But he migrated and had "faith in Massachusetts," which he now enjoys upon others.

Whatever he is, whatever he becomes, Plymouth, the old-fashioned townships in the back country of the Vermont hills, will have a share in his fame. The simplicity of its mountain places, entered into his character, and the simplicity of its plain folk has been impressed upon his commerce with men as he toiled up the trail to renown. Calvin Coolidge will have other vacations, but none to be remembered with more satisfaction than the return to the hands of his boyhood and the attitude of the Republican Party for Vice President and distinguished among Vermont's sons.
